

Several Corona locations used in the filming of “Storm Warning” in 1949

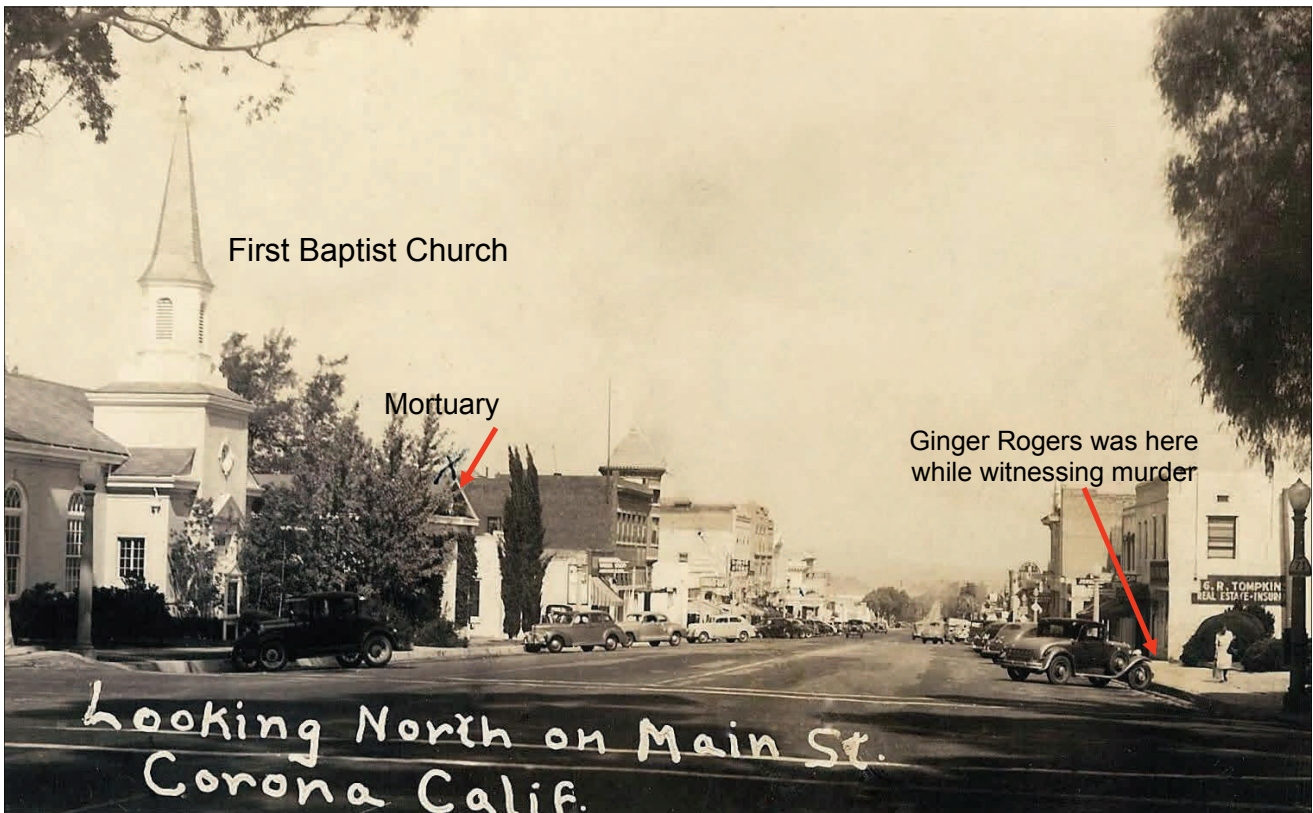

North side of City Hall was transformed into the exit of County Jail for the movie

Corona's 1st City Hall was located on the northeast corner of 8th and Main.
This photo is courtesy of Barbara Becker

Both the church and the mortuary are seen in the background in the movie.
This area at 8th and Main is where many pivotal scenes were filmed.

This photo was taken from near the intersection of 8th and Main - circa 1946

Ginger Rogers headed for Esther's Drive-in, once located at 409 West 6th

1st floor of Corona's 1st City Hall is where courtroom scene was filmed

Bill's Chevron Station at 802 S. Main Street

First Baptist Church

Chevron station

The Klan and their victim at 8th and Main

Corona's Pacific Electric Depot was transformed into a bus depot in "Storm Warning".

Depot was once located at the southeast corner of 3rd and Main - where Chevron station is now.

Filming for "Storm Warning" was also done at Blandi's Food Market at 316 Main Street.
Photo is courtesy of the Corona Public Library.